BELBIN®

Belbin is a way to talk about how people behave.

Over many years, Dr Meredith Belbin closely studied people at work. From his research, he discovered 9 key behaviours: that's 9 different ways of working and contributing to a team or organisation. He called them Team Roles. Each one has plus points (the strengths) and minus points (the allowable weaknesses). It is usual to have both the strength and the allowable weakness for a particular role.

PLANT

Strengths: Creative, imaginative and original. Solves difficult problems.

Allowable weaknesses: Can ignore other considerations and be too busy with new ideas to communicate effectively.

RESOURCE INVESTIGATOR

Strengths: Enthusiastic and communicative. Explores opportunities and enjoys meeting new people.

Allowable weaknesses: Can be over-optimistic, then lose interest once initial enthusiasm has passed.

CO-ORDINATOR

Strengths: Mature and confident. Aware of priorities. Encourages others.

Allowable weaknesses: Can ask others to do things that they should do themselves.

TEAMWORKER

Strengths: Works well with others, is perceptive and diplomatic. Listens well and avoids friction.

Allowable weaknesses: Can be indecisive in important situations.

MONITOR EVALUATOR

Strengths: Weighs and balances all options without emotion. Judges accurately.

Allowable weaknesses: Can lack drive and ability to inspire others.

SHAPER

Strengths: Competitive, enjoys working under pressure. Motivated to overcome difficulties.

Allowable weaknesses: Can be impatient and offend other people.

IMPLEMENTER

Strengths: Efficient and likes structured working. Turns ideas into practical actions.

Allowable weaknesses: Doesn't like change and can be inflexible.

COMPLETER FINISHER

Strengths: Searches out and corrects mistakes. Ensures work is done to a high standard and points out omissions.

Allowable weaknesses: Inclined to worry and become anxious. Doesn't like to share work with others.

SPECIALIST

Strengths: Dedicated to a particular subject. Provides knowledge and skills that others do not possess.

Allowable weaknesses: Contributes only on a narrow front. Dwells on technicalities.

These are the Team Roles you said you preferred from highest to lowest.

You may not have a score for every role – that's ok.

What does this mean?

Sam - you see yourself primarily as a Specialist and a Teamworker. Specialists are the kind of people who like to build up their knowledge in a particular direction or subject. They stay focused and have a thirst for learning. In due course, the Specialist is the kind of person who becomes an expert in a particular area of interest. Teamworkers care about others. Accordingly, they are generally both liked and popular amongst their colleagues. They adapt and will do what is required. They support and fit in. They are versatile. This combination of top two Team Roles suggests someone willing to learn, fit into a team and work with others. All these qualities are much appreciated by managers employing new recruits.

Do you agree with the graph and description? Are there any surprises?

You asked people who know you well for their feedback.

This is what they have observed.

Your observers see some different strengths than you do. They see you primarily as an Implementer. This is by far your strongest role. Implementers are good at getting work done. They thrive in situations requiring structure, discipline and routine. Implementers are hard workers who will tackle tasks in a practical way. It is said that people in jobs end up doing the parts they like and ignore the parts they feel uncomfortable doing. Implementers do all work regardless of preferences. This may be because a true Implementer just hates to see any work left undone.

What do they all agree on?

Your observers think that you're dependable and can be trusted to do your part. They also think you are very effective at getting things done and would be well suited to organising and planning. They see that you are good at identifying essential work. It is also observed that you are great at being able to get on with things on your own, without always having to draw on the help of others. Furthermore they also see that you are extremely versatile. Being able to fit in and adapt as required is critical when starting work. For more information about your observations, please refer to appendices 1 and 2.

Do you agree? Can you think of a situation where people may have seen these behaviours?

Taking what you think and what others have observed, here's the overall picture.

This is the profile we will be concentrating on throughout the rest of your report.

The complete picture is a combination of your views and the views of others.

We combine all the information together, taking account of many factors including how close your views are to those of others. Overall, you are regarded primarily as an Implementer and a Specialist.

What does this mean? It means, Sam, that you're someone who can apply your studies to practical plans and activities.

Do you agree with this complete picture? Is there anything you're surprised about?

Now you understand your Team Role strengths, here's how you can make the most of them.

A bit more detail about what you do best

You're able to use your learning and subject knowledge to achieve practical results. Studying, reading and attending courses can help you explore different ways to apply your learning to different tasks and activities.

You're good at setting yourself up with work and getting on with what needs to be done, so present yourself as someone who is efficient, self-starting and willing to learn.

There is a chance that you might be seen as someone who wants to keep things the same, especially in your area of interest. Be open to different ideas and try to ensure that your focus is not so narrow that you miss out on opportunities which could be useful to you.

Another plus point

You also appear to be someone who takes an interest in others and wants to help. Focus on developing good relationships with other people and understanding the way that people behave with one another. Watch out to see if anything needs to be done and offer to do it.

Something to bear in mind

At the moment, you don't seem to be someone who gets out and about to meet new people and find out what's possible. It's important to keep in touch with someone who is good at doing that, so you don't miss out on what is happening elsewhere.

Learning Style

You're likely to manage and organise your own learning, working efficiently and digging deep to find out all you can about a particular subject.

Here are your top four Team Roles and the working styles associated with each combination.

When you are in an interview, you can use these phrases to talk about how you like to work best.

Show off your strengths

- Talk about times when you've put a plan in place and worked efficiently to achieve a particular result.
- Make sure you show that you're someone who is organised and can turn ideas into practical action.

You might want to give this some thought

- You like to get things done and may not spend much time talking to others to learn about other ways of doing things. Can you think of a time where you've had to go and find out information? Did this help you to work more efficiently?

Describe your strengths and potential weak points. How could you use this information at an interview?

Using everything you have learned about your Belbin Team Roles, write a brief personal summary that you could use as part of an application.

Here is the breakdown of how people saw your Team Role behaviours.

Things to think about:

- People may see different strengths in you.
- You might have different relationships with each of them, depending on the situations in which they see you.
- Don't get too hung up on the details, the variations may only be slight.
- Think about why people might see you differently and how that could affect what they think of your Team Roles.

You asked other people to complete a questionnaire about you, ticking words and phrases they think apply to you and your behaviour.

Here is a summary of the words they ticked. It's normal to have zeroes.
